

Coronavirus Travel Frequently Asked Questions

Should I cancel my trip?

At this time CDC recommends avoiding travel to affected areas, especially for older adults and anyone with a serious medical condition. The situation is changing quickly. A list of locations with travel notices is available at <https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/travelers/index.html>

Is it safe to go on a cruise?

Cruises put large numbers of people, often from countries, in frequent and close contact with each other. This can promote the spread of respiratory viruses, such as the virus that causes COVID-19. You may get sick from close contact with an infected person or by touching contaminated surfaces.

CDC is recommending all travelers avoid cruise ships at this time.

Can I get Coronavirus on an airplane?

Air moves and is filtered differently on airplanes. Therefore, most viruses and other germs do not spread easily. Although the risk of infection on an airplane is low, travelers should try to avoid contact with sick passengers and wash their hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds. If soap and water are not available, use hand sanitizer that contain 60%–95% alcohol. For more information: Exposure Risk During Travel

What if I traveled to an area affected and got sick?

If you traveled to an affected area and feel sick with fever, cough, or have difficulty breathing, within 14 days after you left you should call your doctor. Also, avoid contact with others, wash your hands often, and cough and sneeze into your elbow.
